

Basic Needs Center Peer Conversations

Noah Adams

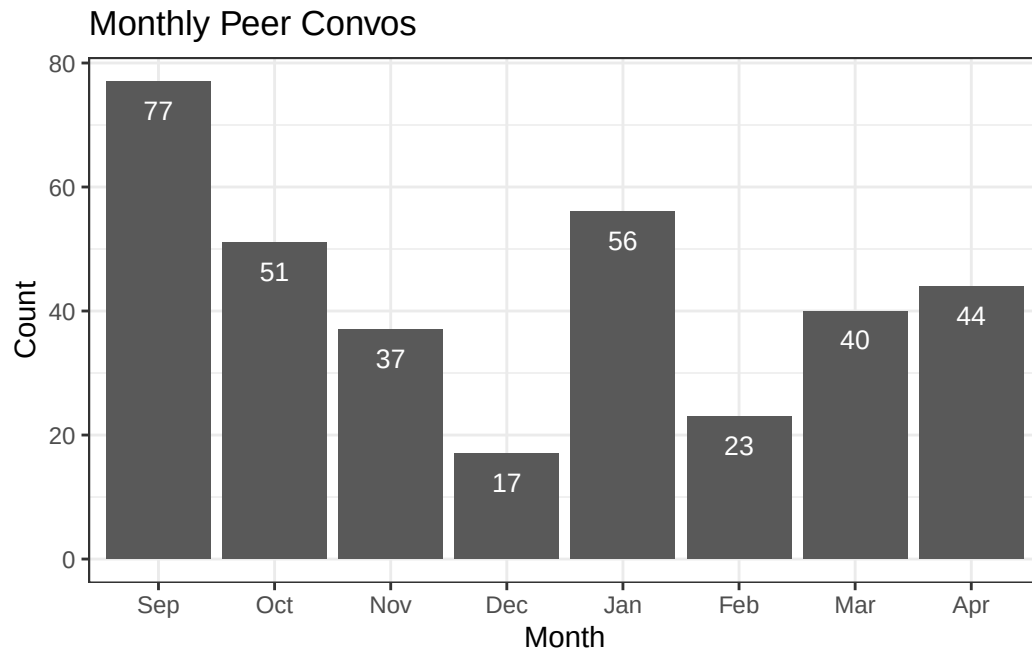

What is a Peer Conversation?

At the OSU Basic Needs Center, we have strategy conversations with students about housing, food, living on a limited budget, and anything else related to someone's basic needs. Following these conversations, we fill out a form recording what referrals were made, and what the conversation was about. In this report, I hope to analyze and further explore the peer conversations we have at the BNC.

Please note that the data for September has been measured only from the 15th to the 30th.

Conversations Over Time

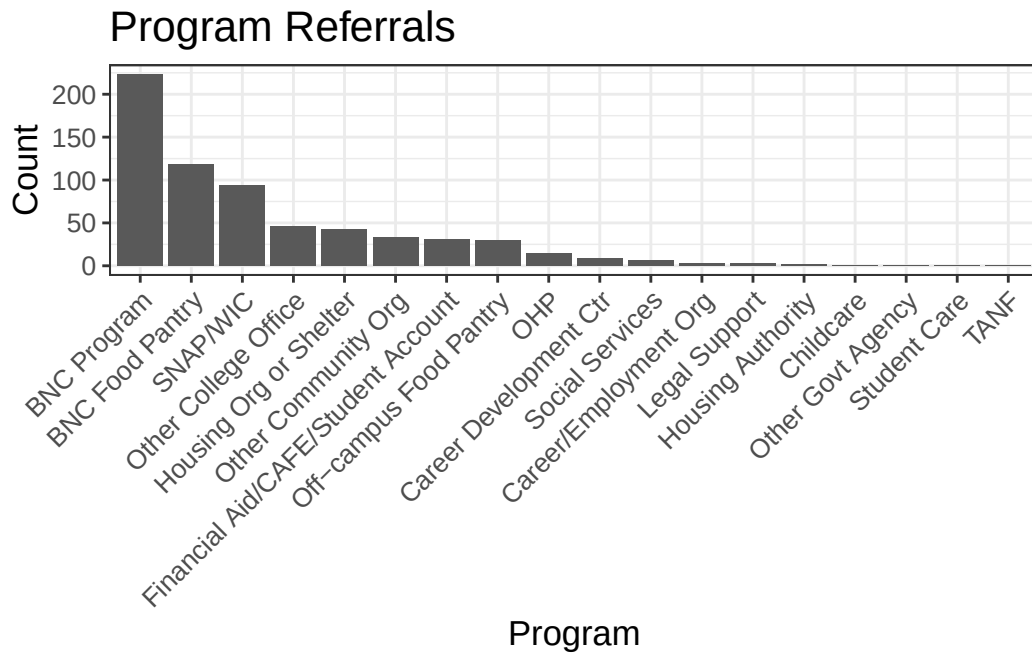

A noticeable pattern is the big surges of convos at the start of the term. The drop in December could be explained by Winter Break.

Referrals During Peer Conversations

Frequently during conos, we refer people to other resources both on and off campus. Helping people utilize the full network of resources available to them is crucial.

Summary of Referrals

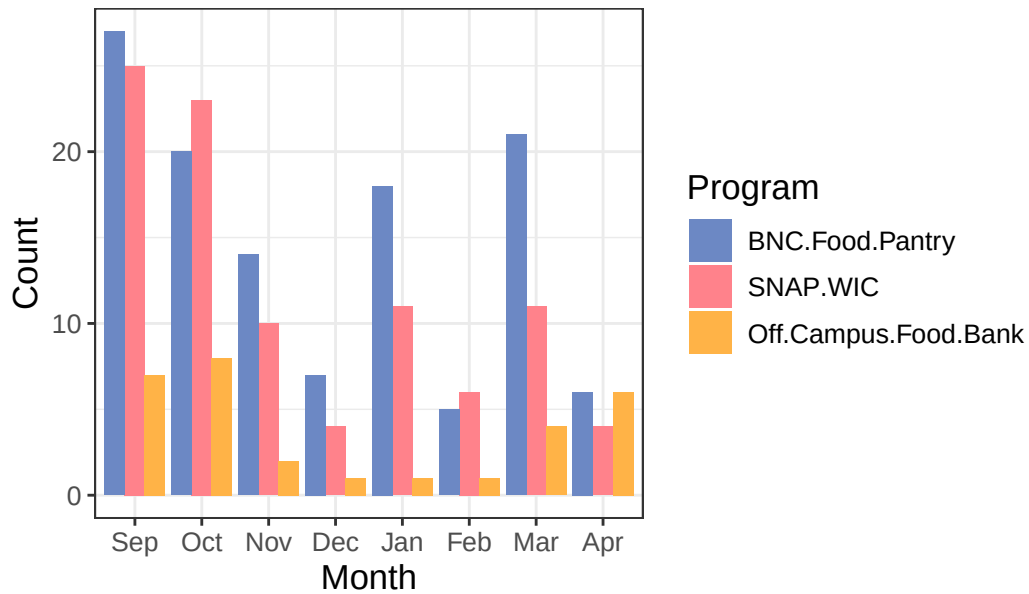

Subsets of Program Data

Below, the referrals made for resources relevant to two of our major areas of support, food and housing, are isolated and count is shown over time.

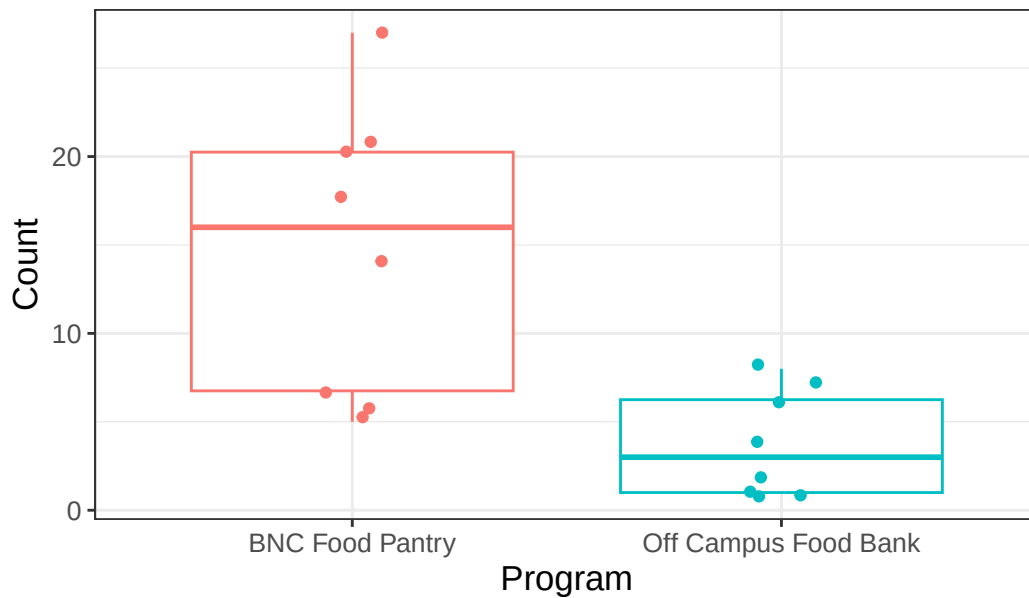

Food Program Referrals

Food Program Referrals

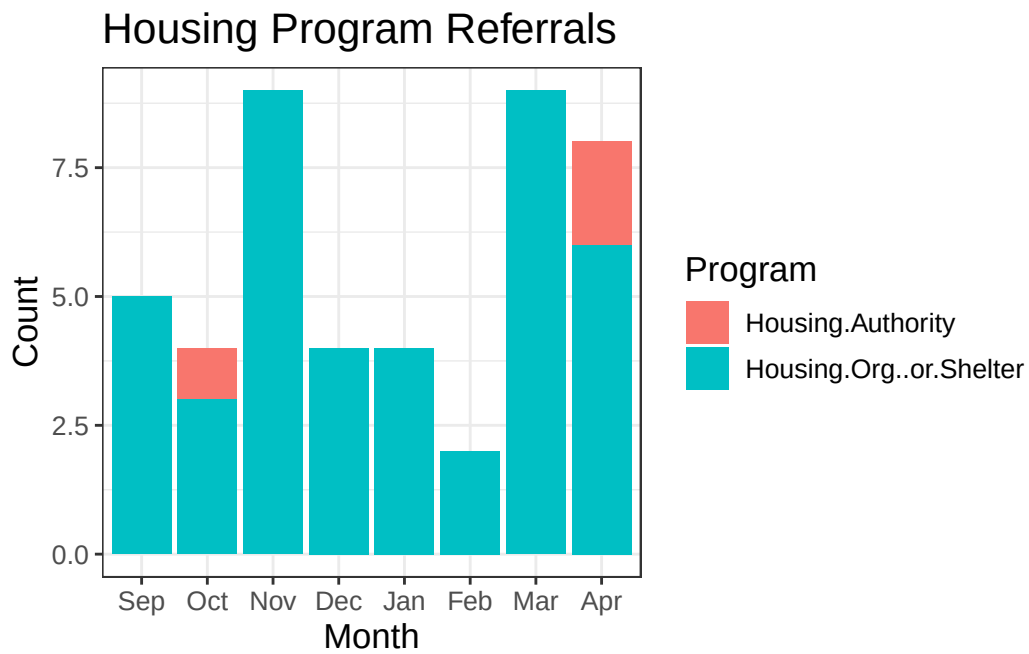

While referrals to the BNC Food Pantry are high, the bar chart above and the box plot below highlight that we don't make a lot of referrals to off-campus food banks, when maybe we should as part of someone's food strategy.

Monthly Food Program Referrals

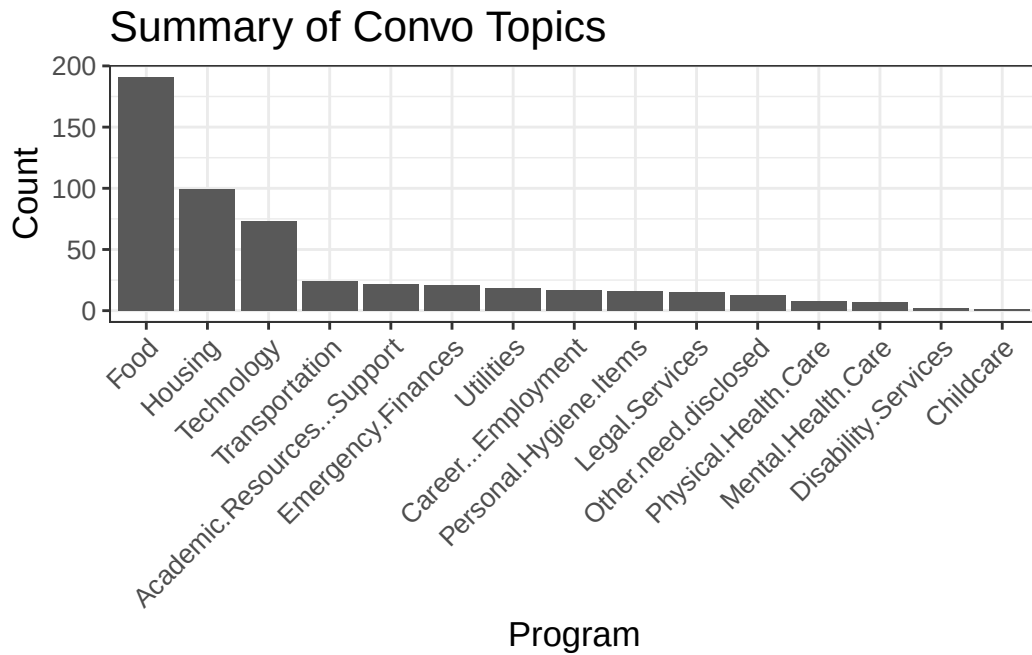

Housing Program Referrals

Topics of Conversations

Summary of Topics

Breaking down what kinds of conversations we are having, a clear trend arises of focusing on food, housing, and technology.

Three Main Topics

